

In this workshop you will:

- Learn how to maximize the here and now
- Learn how to shift the pattern of attachment
- Leave with strategies you can use tomorrow in your practice

Time-Limited Dynamic Psychotherapy (TLDP) provides a state-of-the-art, empirically-supported model of treatment that incorporates current developments in neuroscience, object-relations, attachment, emotionally-focused, and experiential theories, as well as cognitive-behavioral and systems approaches. This introductory/intermediate workshop will give practical information to therapists who wish to “make every session count” with their clients. TLDP privileges accessing deep emotion and experiential learning.

Until recently, most short-term models were considered inappropriate for clients with chronic problems or personality disorders. TLDP is a flexible approach designed to treat people with long-standing, dysfunctional ways of dealing with others—the so-called “difficult client.” By means of the “dynamic focus,” TLDP teaches a method of focusing that is behaviorally based and explicit. Attendees have found this approach extremely useful whether they see people in short or long-term therapies.

In this workshop, Dr. Levenson will illustrate the principles and practice of TLDP with video segments of actual therapy sessions with real clients. The rich clinical material will provide a “how to do it” focus, and create a bridge from the specifics of theory to the reality of practice. Ongoing interaction with workshop participants will keep the learning experience active and relevant. While the workshop will center on individual treatment, TLDP is also applicable for couples and groups.

Workshop Presenter

has specialized in training professionals in brief therapy for over thirty years. She is the author of over 75 professional papers and of two books (Time Limited Dynamic Psychotherapy: A Guide to Clinical Practice, and Brief Dynamic and Interpersonal Therapy). She has just completed a third book to be published by the American Psychological Association (APA) on integrating emotionally-focused and interpersonal approaches. In addition, Dr. Levenson has two professional videos illustrating her approach and has just completed a six session therapy-over-time DVD for APA to be released later this year as part of their Expert Therapist Series. She is known for her down-to-earth, engaging and pragmatically-useful presentation style.

Dr. Levenson is a Fellow of Division 29 (Psychotherapy) of the APA and Professor at the Wright Institute in Berkeley, California. She is a certified Emotionally Focused Therapy (EFT) supervisor and therapist, and sees individuals and couples in her private practice. For twenty years Dr. Levenson was Clinical Professor in the Department of Psychiatry, University of California School of Medicine and Director of the Brief Therapy Program at the VA Medical Center in San Francisco. She has taught at Stanford University and has given numerous workshops and presentations on TLDP to various community mental health centers, private practice groups, hospitals, and universities nationally and internationally.
